LOVE MAKES THE WORLD GO ROUND.

[Abbie M. Gannett.]

When Love had kissed fair Beauty's cheek,
And Beauty, waking in surprise,
Turned not away her glances meek
From the soft ardor of his eyes,
Then, heart to heart and lip to lip,
Awoke that passion pure and bright,
To make the days like moments slip,
To banish all the shades of night.

And was this all? O Love, Love, Love,
The world was dead until you came!
Dead, cold, inert, below, above,
Till kindled by your generous flame;
You made the very mould to speak,
With tender leaf and flower to thrill;
When kisses soft met Beauty's cheek,
With fruitful life teemed vale and hill.
And man? That rude, unsentient clod,
Like one in fetters firmly bound,
Now walks in spirit like a God!
'Tis Love that makes the world go round!

THE FIRST SHADOW.

It was evening. Arthur Roberts and his pretty bride, Belle, had that day taken the vows which had constituted them one. For the first time since that event, Arthur found himself alone with his bride for a moment. Prompted by an impulse he could not restrain, he kissed her tenderly, and then as he pressed her to his bosom, whispered:

'Darling, you are all my own now, and we will be very happy all our lives; will we not, dear wife?'

'Oh, I so much hope so,' the fond wife answered, bowing her head upon his shoulder, and looking up into his face with an expression of tender love. 'But still, Arthur, I almost tremble when I recollect how many of my dearest friends have entered married life with promises almost as bright as mine, only to have them all crushed and trampled into domestic unhappiness.'

'Do you fear that we shall be unhappy?' the young man asked.

For a moment he seemed suspicious that all was not right with his fair young bride, but her very attitude was enough to drive away such thoughts from his mind, and he added, a moment later

'I know you have no fears, Belle; nor have I. 'Tis true there are many unhappy marriages, but we will show all our unfortunate friends how to have peace and happiness in their households.'

Belle uttered her assurance that they should be very happy, and then they moved away to rejoin their friends.

Arthur Roberts had not made a mistake in supposing that the keys of happiness in the home circle lay in his own possession.

During his minority his father died, leaving all his hard earned accumulations in trust for him, so that upon reaching his majority he found himself with a good business knowledge and several thousand dollars capital to develop that knowledge.

For three years he had been engaged in business, and during that time his course had been one of success. Finally, therefore, he felt justified in taking the beautiful Belle to his home.

Arthur believed he had studied human nature deeply, that he had traced out all the sources of misery and uncongeniality in wedded life. Hence arose his positiveness upon the subject.

For some time everything moved along perfectly, and all was happiness about the young merchant's hearthstone. Arthur was in an ecstacy.

He knew the secret of happy married life, and many a brief lesson did he deliver to his bachelor friends upon his now favorite theme. But he did not consider that no cause of sorrow or trial had yet come to them.

When the moment arrived, he was to learn that perfect theories might not always succeed. In fact, an obstacle which many a less philosophic husband might have made an element of more perfect strength, was to throw a more than passing shadow upon their happiness.

It was some distance from his store to his residence, and during the busiest of the season it was seldom he returned till evening, taking a lunch at the nearest restaurant.

Then it was so pleasant to be met when he returned by the smiling Belle, with his slippers and dressing-gown, and to enjoy the nice tea, served up as he prided himself only his wife could do it.

Yes; it was very pleasant, but as the time passed he began to consider it his right rather than privilege. The kind acknowledgments with which these little offices had been received at first were finally disregarded, and he came to receive them as only his just deserts.

Yet this model husband knew not that he was rapidly periling the happiness of his entire life. Arthur was but human, and 'tis human to err.

One evening he returned at the usual time, but there was no quick steps to meet him, and he was even obliged to ring for admittance. The servant girl opened the door, and he pushed in without a word. He was weary and vexed with the duties of the day, and wondered why she was not waiting for him.

'Where is Belle?' he asked, pushing into the little sitting-room, where they were accustomed to spend their evenings.

'Deed, sir, I don't know, 'less she's in her own room. The dear woman's not a bit well herself, and she may have dropped asleep.'

There was a dissatisfied expression upon the young merchant's face, but he threw open the window, and continued:

'If you please, Mary, you can bring my dressing-gown and slippers.'

'Deed I will, sir. Where'll I find them?'

Here was a poser. Arthur did not know. Belle always brought them and took them away again. He suggested several places, from which they were not forthcoming.

'Never mind,' he said: 'I suppose tea is ready.'

'Deed, sir, it is not. I was going to ask Mrs. Roberts about it. I'll go now.'

'No, no; you see to getting it ready, and I'll find her. Pretty work, this,' he mused as the servant disappeared.

He turned toward the stairway, but before reaching it the door was opened and Belle entered. There were pain marks upon her pallid face, and the most careless observer must have seen that she suffered deeply.

'Oh, you've come!' the husband exclaimed; but he did not turn to meet her, or exhibit any pleasure at her appearance.

'Really, I did not think it so late,' she said, in low tones. 'My side and head have ached terribly this afternoon, and when they became a little easier, I feel asleep and did not wake in time. I am sorry to have kept you waiting.'

'But you might have instructed Mary to have tea, and placed my dressing-gown and slippers where they could be found!'

Arthur did not speak as pleasantly as he might, nor was it his manner alone which brought tears to Belle's eyes.

Without a word she turned to a small closet opening out of the apartment, and produced the articles mentioned. Placing them beside his easy-chair, she hastened to the kitchen.

'I've seen her take them out of there fifty times at least,' mused Arthur. 'But for the life of me I could not tell where to look for them.'

He proceeded to put them on, but from some cause they did not feel as comfortable as usual. Then he sat down by the window and tried to read, but could not feel interested and threw down the paper as Belle entered to announce tea.

The meal was partaken of in silence, and after it was ended, and they repaired to the sitting-room, the same silence prevailed. A shadow—the first—had fallen across that household.

The little room was just as pleasant as ever; the gas turned as brightly; but the inmates were changed.

Arthur took up the evening paper and read it again and again, till every paragraph was stamped upon his mind. Then he held it before his eyes and tried to think of business matters; but that effort was in vain. Finally throwing down the paper he exclaimed, rather fretfully:

'How dull it is here! Can't you play and sing something?'

'Perhaps I can play,' the gentle wife responded, endeavoring to be cheerful; 'but singing is out of my power to-night.'

'Well, let's have the music then. Anything for the sake of a change.'

Her heart swelling with the first unhappiness of her married life, the young wife took her way to the piano and commenced running her fingers over the keys.

She was a finished player, but in her present state she realized her inability to perform well. Accordingly, she commenced playing a beautiful though simple march.

Roberts listened a few moments, and then turned the music over with an impatient, dissatisfied air.

'Do let's have something a little livelier than that old humdrum piece,' he said.

He selected a wild fantasia and placed it upon the instrument. The knowledge that she could not render it properly added to the poor woman's embarrassment. She made frequent mistakes, and finally became quite confused, stopping short in one of the most intricate and delicious passages.

'Never mind,' Arthur observed; 'if you can't play, let it alone!'

A mighty effort enabled the wife to suppress her tears, and she still endeavored to be cheerful.

When morning came Belle was nervous and weak, but she would utter no complaint, and the moment his breakfast was disposed of, Arthur started for his store.

The day was dull, and its gloom irritated the feelings of the merchant. Trade was but trifling, and he had good opportunity for reflection.

At times he felt that he had been wrong the evening before in allowing his vexation to be so apparent, but he could devise many a good excuse, so that he felt, or tried to feel, justified in the course he had taken.

But all this while conscience was whispering that he had been very unjust and wounded his wife's feelings without any cause.

He could not drive away the whispering monitor. He took his lunch, as usual, and then returned to pace up and down the store.

He had never felt so unpleasant before, and to increase the trouble, he saw not how the unpleasantness would end.

Just as the store was about being closed, for it was kept open very seldom of an evening, some business came to hand which required his immediate attention, and Arthur and his book-keeper were detained an hour beyond the usual time. When it was completed they closed the store and walked away in company, as their route was the same for several blocks.

A short distance from Roberts' store they passed another, which was closed and the door draped with crape.

'A sad case, that, of Mrs. Parks,' the bookkeeper remarked, nodding in the direction of the door.

'In what respect, Jared?'

'The manner of the lady's death, sir. Parks and I were school-boys together. He has only been married six months. When he left home yesterday morning she was rather indisposed, but he thought nothing of it, and came down town as usual. Before noon they sent for him, as she was dying, and when he reached the house she was dead. Singular, wasn't it?'

'Very.'

Arthur Roberts thought for a moment of the man whose household had been thus thrown into mourning, and then his thoughts traveled quickly to his own. He remembered of the illness of his own wife. Could it be that she was very sick? He started at the thought as though struck by a shot. Possibly she was dangerously ill—perchance he should never speak to her again! How bitterly he recollected his heartless words of the night previous!

Fortunately their ways diverged at this point, and forgetting all save the pale face of his suffering wife, Arthur started forward at a run. Block after block was passed, but he seemed to be no nearer. How long the distance seemed. He reached the door at length and burst it open. No one came to meet him. The little sitting room was deserted, but he heard the heavy tread of the servant ascending the kitchen stairs. A thousand distinct emotions were experienced as he approached her door, careful lest a rude step should disturb her. He swung the door open, for it was ajar, and stepped inside. The wife lay upon the bed sleeping, the pain marks still deeply stamped upon her features. He saw at once that she was quite ill, and tears, which did no discredit to his manhood, sprang to his eyes. As he would have turned away there was a slight movement, and the sleeper awoke.

'You are much worse, my dear Belle,' he said, tenderly, as the blue eyes unclosed.

'Oh, no,' she answered, quickly; 'I feel much better now. I have been in pain, and weak and foolish, and so became nervous.'

'I don't blame you, my dear Belle, for getting nervous,' he said. 'I was a brute to you last night, but I have been very unhappy to-day, for I saw my mistake, and if you'll forgive me we'll try once more.'

There was a happy greeting, a softly whispered assurance that all was forgiven, and the first shadow vanished more quickly than it had appeared.

In a few days Belle was well again, for tenderness and love work decided cures sometimes.

Arthur Roberts had learned a lesson he never forgot. It was bitter at the time, but it was needed. He learned to govern any selfish feeling that might arise, and to prize the untiring kindness of his wife more and more deeply as time passed on.

How Many Know?

In these days of campaign vituperation and lying, and these democratic attemps to construct mountains out of mole-hills, let men of sense stop and think! Read the whole Fisher & Mulligan series of letters and then ask yourself what is there in them? Mr. Blaine is nobly vindicated by their publication! How many know—

1. That the Little Rock & Fort Smith Railroad bill passed both Houses of Congress unanimously.

2. That Mr. Blaine's ruling on it was right and just and could not have been withheld in honor.

3. That when it was made he did not have the acquaintance of a single person interested in the road or instrumental in promoting the passage of the bill.

4. That he alluded to his connection with the bill after his interest in the road had been obtained.

5. That the bill was a declaratory statute merely, not granting lands nor reviving a dormant or lapsed grant, and conferring no original nor substantial rights nor benefits.

6. That the investment was a losing one.

7. That Mr. Blaine honorably shouldered all the loss and restored to his friends every cent they had invested in the bonds on his representations.

8. That in the letters addressed to Fisher he said he had done the friends of the bill "a service without knowing it."

9. That instead of obtaining a favor through the managers of the road he suffered a severe pecuniary loss.

10. That his ruling as Speaker was in no sense caused by his interest in the road, but was six months antecedent to his obtaining a share in it.

11. That he did not rule in favor of the bill (which passed both Houses unanimously) because he was interested in the road, but became interested in the road because his attention was directed to it during the passage of the bill through Congress.

12. That the land grant was simply restored to the State of Arkansas, which confered it upon the road.

13. That the justice of the bill continuing the grant and the rightfulness of Mr. Blaine's ruling in point of law have not been disputed from that day to this, and cannot be.

The American people possess an inherent abiding love for fair play and as surely as election day comes, will tell these slanderers at the polls what their opinion is of this species of campaign warfare.

EFFECTS OF THE IMAGINATION.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

Any one can test for himself the effect of concentrating the attention upon a limb or organ. If one will think steadfastly for from three to five minutes of his great toe, or one of the fingers, he will find that sensations not before perceived will make themselves felt in the part to which attention has been directed. If an attempt is made to count the acts of breathing, the number of respirations in the minute will be found to be either increased or diminished from the number natural to the person.

In every class of medical students there are to be found individuals who suffer from disease of the heart when when the lecturer is portraying the symptoms of affections of that organ, but whose cardiac affections pass off as soon as another range of disease is taken up for description.

The influence of the emotions upon the circulation of the blood and the secretions of the different organs are well known. The blush of shame, the pallor of fear, the cold sweat of horror, fainting from fright or on hearing good or bad news, the dryness of the mouth from anxiety or trepidation, the palpitations of the lover, the tears of grief, the "watering of the mouth" at the thought of food in the sufferer from hunger; all these demonstrate the enormous influence the feelings exert over the functions of different parts even during health. That the same emotions would have as great an effect when the body is weakened by disease is as certain as any fact in human nature. That they have a great effect is proven by the experience of mankind.

No one can, with absolute accuracy, foretell "the curative power of nature" in every case of disease. Instances are numberless of the doctor having "given up" his patient, who straightway began to improve. More than one cemetery certificate has been written by the attending physician, in this city, for patients who recovered. These events add still more to the proof of the fallibility of human judgment. The ability to predict the outcome of any given case rests, of course, on the experience and acumen of the practitioner. Such errors as those just alluded to are no basis for reflection on the uncertainty of science, but are evidences of unexpected strength of the patient's constitution or of want of knowledge or experience on the part of the attendant. If a teaspoonful of sugared water or a dose of some secret nostrum has been administered at the critical moment, of course this gets the credit of curing the patient. If despairing friends offer up their passionate prayers, instead of trusting further to the powerless agencies of the apothecary, then faith has succeeded when everything else has failed.

In case a rheumatic patient falls into the hands of a "magnetic healer," or one who cures by "the laying on of hands" (which generally involves a vigorous rubbing), he is very sure to be benefited if not entirely relieved. To be sure, the same amount of force applied by a person having no sort of reputation as a "healer" would do as well, but the fears of the patient are frequently sufficient to prevent the proper amount of passive exercise if they are not counterbalanced by a good amount of faith in the supposed powers of the manipulator. The efficacy of most liniments, embrocations, "wizard oils" and the like, depend upon the amount of force expended in the application to the skin, not to anything taken up by the surface—the latter being practically impenetrable so long as it remains unbroken.

The Unknown Constituency.

[Argonaut "Bubbles."]

There are two or three weekly papers in New York devoted to the diffusion of literary dishwater, whose circulation reaches a half million. Two or three weeklies of the same sort, published in London, circulate their one million copies. Who the deuce are the readers who guzzle down these brimming floods of wash and scum from the culinary department of letters? In the absence of any accurate knowledge of the facts, it used to be thought a sufficient answer to say: The sewing-girls and other young women of about their mental equipment; the unknown constituency will be found less in the lower middle than in the upper lower classes.

This answer served till it occurred to one of those nosing Englishmen who want to know, you know, that he would run the subject to earth. He did so, and found that the papers in question were nearly unknown to the whole lower class, and that their enormous constituency lay in the middle class—most of it, of course, in the lower half of that class, but an astonishingly large proportion above the median line.

Machinery for China.

[Chicago Herald.]

The secretary of the Chinese embassy says there are many articles made by machinery in America that would find a good market in China. He mentions petroleum, cotton goods, carpenters' and other tools, sewing and tin machines and silver-plated ware. Chopsticks (Chinese knife and fork) are consumed by millions, yet each is made by hand. Some machine similar to that which makes matches could be easily invented, and would reap a fortune for its inventor. In such industries as those of the potter, the carver, metal-worker, glass-maker, forge and foundry man, and cobbler, the methods of to-day are those of twenty centuries ago. The introduction of machinery would revolutionize all this and increase the productiveness of Chinese labor five-fold.

Naval Mistakes.

[Chicago Journal.]

It is some slight comfort to know that other nations besides ourselves sometimes blunder in the construction of war vessels. The Ajax and Agamemnon of the British navy, which took nearly eight years to construct, and cost about $5,500,000, are pronounced to be failures. Per contra, a private firm on the Thames built an ironclad of 6,000 tons for a foreign government in two years, which not alone embodied all the latest improvements, but cost only a quarter of the amount which has been squandered on the Ajax and Agamemnon.

Explanation Cards.

[Chicago Times.]

The idea of explanation cards to guide the visitor at the electricial exhibition in Philadelphia might be usefully applied to the exhibition of machinery at our industrial fairs. Curious and interesting exhibitions are often only exasperating to the visitor, which might become more satisfactory and more instructive by a short account of their methods of operation. Exhibitions could be made thoroughly educative.

In the Lions' Den.

[Exchange.]

"No, I never feel nervous," said Cetewayo, otherwise Mr. Porter, the colored gentleman who exercises the lions at the London aquarium. "You see, I worked my way up among animals, beginning at the smaller sorts and going upward through the snakes to the lions and tigers. I learned my business from an excellent man named Conkling. I well remember the first time I entered a cage of lions. There were two lions and one tiger. My master stood outside with his whip. I did not feel afraid, I was so used to the animals. Yes, of course, there is a certain amount of danger. For instance, a short time since I was giving a 'parade' when there had been a heavy storm of rain, and my foot slipped on the floor of the cage, which was wet. In a minute they were all upon me, and began 'chawing' away at my leg. However, I had a 'turn-up' with them with my whip, and managed to get out of the cage. That job laid me up in hospital for two months.

"There is not much difficulty in teaching lions to leap over fire. You see, they soon get into the way of jumping over the board, and then the rest is easily managed. The lion that lies down at the end of the cage is the quietest; but he would be the worst of the lot if he saw his chance. No, you don't see many American negroes (like myself) at this business. The native Africans and the native West Indians are the best at it, used as they are to live in the neighborhood of wild beasts. The natives of India are brave enough when 'beating' on a hunting expedition in the open, but they are afraid to go into a cage with a lion or tiger. The great thing in keeping lions in good condition is not to overfeed them. You will see many animals in menageries and zoological gardens who do not look as healthy as ours do, though they have actually more room. The reason is that they get too much to eat and not enough exercise. Ten pounds of meat a day is ample for any lion. Besides, you see, ours perform twice daily. And the work is good for them. On Sundays we cut up bullock's livers for them, and that acts like medicine upon the animals. Yes, that cage cost a lot of money. You see, it closes down like a telescope until it is only three or four feet high. That tusker there," (pointing to a large elephant who drags in the cage) "is a devil. He has killed three keepers already, and he tried to pin me against the wall yesterday. No, thanks, I don't drink. It's bad for the nerves, and one wants them in good order for our business."

Forests for Ireland.

[Popular Science Monthly.]

At the suggestion of Dr. Lyon, member of parliament for Dublin, Mr. D. Howitz, forest conservator for Denmark, has made an examination of the resources and need of Ireland for forest cultivation, and his observations and conclusions, which have been embodied in a parliamentary report, forcibly illustrate the evils consequent upon the reckless denudation of the land of its forests. He has found that "swamps and morasses are created in Ireland from the want of trees to drink up the superfluous moisture. Irish rivers inundate the districts they traverse because there are no forests on the mountain tops to arrest and retain the autumn and spring rains. In summer there is a dearth of water, because the trees are gone which would have served each as a reservoir. Irish agriculture, by its system of straight drains, which Mr. Howitz entirely disapproves, has acted [illegible] ment. In the past by felling the mountain woods, and in the present by planting no successors, it has done worse by tapping the supply at its source. Irish fruitfulness is gradually being drained and washed away into the lakes and seas, and no preparation has been made to replenish it.

Fortunately, however, the island presents the especial conditions for rendering forestry easy and beneficial. Five millions of its 20,000,000 acres are waste, and might be planted with a reasonable certainty of profit; and these lands would grow valuable timber instead of the commoner and cheaper kinds. The list of available trees includes thirty-six conifers, thirty-eight deciduous and hard wood species, and eight sorts of bushes. Mr. Howitz has drawn up from personal inspection a scheme for planting a hundred thousand acres every year for the next thirty years. By the end of that time a plantation, he estimates, will come to a full productive capacity, besides having already given incidental returns from brushwood and saplings.

Politics in the Sandwich Islands.

[Exchange.]

From the papers at hand it would seem as though politics in the Sandwich islands teapot were at a boiling stage. Just before the last steamer left, a resolution of want of confidence in the ministry was introduced in the legislature. It was lost by four votes.

These are four ministers, all of whom have votes.

Attorney-General Neumann, late of San Francisco, in replying to the strictures of a political adversary, said, in the house, that the person in question was "a liar, a blackguard and a scoundrel." From this guarded language one would naturally infer that the attorney-general was aggrieved.

All of the speeches in the house are translated by an interpreter—from Hawaiian to English, and vice versa. It must tax the Hawaiian language pretty severely at times. It is said that the spectacle of the interpreter hopping around, endeavoring to cope with the fluent vindictive of an angry minister, is a sight for gods and men, to weep over.

A Good Line Shot.

[Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.]

"What is the standing army of the United States?" asked the teacher.

"It are the men," replied the smart bad boy, who only came in last term, "who hang on to the straps in the street cars."

And the principal sat up that night until the moon went down trying to decide whether he should mark that boy zero minus and lick him, or ten plus and give him a toy pistol.

Appear to flourish, and you are likely to do so; but let your fortunes perceptibly depreciate, and you find yourself forsaken.

Interesting, but Let's Not Try It.

[Philadelphia Press.]

Somebody of a mathematical turn, with nothing better to do, has made the following computation, which is curious, if not essentially correct. He says that a German mile—about five English miles—contains 25,856 feet; a square German mile contains, therefore, 668,500,000 square feet. The superficial area of the lake of Constance, being 8½ German square miles, therefore contains 5,682,000,000 square feet. They are living on the surface of the globe at this moment, in round numbers, about 1,430,000,000 human beings. Let every man have four square feet allotted to him, and if the lake were frozen over the whole human family might find standing room upon its surface. Should the weight prove too great, the ice break, and the whole human race be submerged, it would only raise the level of the lake about six inches.

A Golden Opinion.

A well known author has said: "Every youth should live with an eye on old age. If he should die before he gets there, it will never do him any injury." Just so should all youth be taught by their parents and teachers that Peruna, the great tonic, is just the remedy he needs for all the ailments to which flesh is heir. Many golden opinions of its value and of its unprecedented success have been received by its discoverers, all of which express the most unbounded confidence in its value as a remedy, and all tell what it has done for the afflicted.

C. H. Walron writes from Brooklyn, New York, that he began taking Peruna while at Conneauton, Pa., for a severe pain in his side. After taking three bottles, the pain was almost entirely removed, and he now asks where he can get the world-renowned tonic in Gotham. He knows where he gets relief. Ask your druggist for Peruna and Manlin, also the "Ills of Life." Sold by A. B. Armstrong, druggist.

What Struck an Old Soldier.

"It will soon be twenty years since the war closed."

Under the hot sun of August, 1884, the village of Dover, N. J., lay still as the sphinx in Egypt while Elijah Sharp, of that place, slowly and softly spoke of the past. "Yes," said he, "I was in the army and saw many of the sights of those fearful years. I was finally discharged from disability, resulting from sunstroke. I came home, miserable in health and spirits; so enfeebled that I took cold on the slightest exposure. Life seemed worthless to me. I only lived in memory."

"That was sad enough," I said, dividing my last two cigars.

"That's so," responded Mr. Sharp, "but I got over it. Outgrew it? Not exactly. When in that condition I began taking PARKER'S TONIC and my health commenced to improve right away. I was astonished at it, and so was my wife. I piled on the flesh and could eat anything. My ambition blazed up. I could attend to business, and now—excepting that I have to care about exposing myself to the hot sun—I am as well as I was the day I enlisted. What difference there are in things—guns and dogs that kill, PARKER'S TONIC saves."

This preparation, which has been known as Parker's Ginger Tonic, will hereafter be called simply Parker's Tonic. As unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior articles under the name of ginger, and as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of Parker's Ginger Tonic, contain the genuine medicine if the fac-simile signature of Hiscox & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

OF MAINE.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL TICKET

STATE

We are confronted with the democratic party, very hungry, and, as you may well believe, very thirsty—a party without a single definite principle, a party without any distinct national policy which it dares to present to the country, a party which fell from power as a conspiracy against human rights and now attempts to sneak back to power as a conspiracy for plunder and spoils.—George Wm. Curtis, June 1884.

[illegible] Cleveland and [illegible] will go into mourning together.

DEMOCRATIC journals would like to make out that Mr. Blaine's health is failing. What troubles them most, however, is the fact that just about now his is rather damp comedy well.

THE democrats pretend to see indications of Cleveland's election sure. They ought to remember that all signs fail in dry time, especially in one which has already lasted twenty days, save for them. When it rains ballots the democratic dish is always bottom up.

WHEN Cleveland wrote his letter of acceptance he evidently had in mind Talleyrand's famous expression: "Language was given to man in which to conceal his thoughts." But he succeeded [illegible] in betraying his absence of thought. Those who are so fond of quoting that letter are doing the same thing.

THE republican county ticket is composed of men who ought all to be elected, and they will be. We appeal to any man of either party who knows the republican candidates whether the democratic ticket contains a name that for any good and sufficient reason should be preferred to that of his opponent on the other side.

THE New York Sun is not quoted [illegible] so generally nor extensively—[illegible] appropriating whole columns [illegible] and palming them off as original matter on their readers by [illegible] democratic organs. A change has come over them [illegible] The Sun must be [illegible] no much [illegible] resolving from that source.

THE RELIGIOUS ISSUE.

"An Irish Democrat," in another column, refers to the assaults made upon Mr. Bannon because of his religion. We have refrained from referring to this religious question because we do not believe it is one that should be lugged into politics. If there is any one principle in the American form of government more sacred than another it is that every man shall worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, without fear or favor from any quarter. Mr. Bannon's opponents we are told are making use of this religious question to suit their occasion. In some sections where the Catholic element is strong the people are told that he is an Orangeman or not a true Catholic. In other sections where the Protestant element predominates, he is pronounced as a Catholic of the extreme type. The truth is Mr. Bannon is an earnest, conscientious member of the Catholic church and he does not hesitate to announce that fact to the world, whenever occasion requires it. His opponent is a man of no religious convictions whatever so far as we have ever been able to ascertain. But a man is a man for a that. If he is upright and conscientious in his dealings with his fellow man, then why should the question of his religion be raised? We hope to hear no more of this fact of our democratic friends persist in raising this issue we are ready for it and if at the close of the contest we find ourselves worsted we will not whine.

NOT BY MUCH.

On the 7th of November 1880 immediately after the presidential election of that year the Chicago Times, a democratic paper published a powerful article clearly and truthfully setting forth the one principal reason why the democratic party was defeated. In our issue of July 18th of this year we published this article in full but we cannot refrain from reproducing at this time the beginning and closing paragraphs of the same as follows:

The recent presidential election has shown that there is no man able reason why the democratic party can never win a national victory. It is that the youths of this republic are not democratic. The sons of democratic fathers have grown up republicans. So long as slavery and the war linger in the memory of Americans the youths of the republic will continue to grow up republicans and slavery and the war will be remembered as long as the public school system exists.

The late defeat can't not be attributed to any other causes. Other causes were at work but they were only incidental. The tariff was one. Sectionalism was a second. [illegible] done was a third. But all these were trivial and together could not have accomplished the result. The result was accomplished because the youths of the republic are not democratic. The party is therefore without a future and without hope. The malediction of the war has palsied it. The curse of slavery has poisoned its blood and rotted its bones.

This article bristles with reasons why the party should have given up the ghost at that time but every effective thing and will come to it conclusion that the curse of slavery has poisoned its blood and rotted the bone of the democratic party. The malediction of the war has palsied it [illegible] an absolute fact can be stated more briefly, forcibly or convincingly. The party is therefore without a future and without a hope. Poor thing. Let it end. Let us hasten to hide its desert. Its end a funeral had, no ten bones and placed from all that oblivion which surely awaits it.

ONE VIEW OF TWO SUBJECTS.

The campaign will rid the country of that political fossil Spoony Ben Butler. After the 4th of November the places that have known him will know him no more forever—for which all praise will be accorded.

One is led to think by the abuse the Blaine organs are heaping upon the prohibitionists of this county that a man has no business to vote according to the dictates of his own conscience. * * * We respect honest opinion and for that reason we admire the action of the prohibitionists of McKean county in cutting loose from a party that has held their votes by deceit and false promises.

One is led to think by the abuse the [illegible] organs are heaping upon the Butlerites of this county that a man has no business to vote according to the dictates of his own conscience. We respect honest opinion and for that reason we admire the action of the Butlerites of McKean county in cutting loose from a party that has held their votes by deceit and false promises.

SIDE FOR THE OTHER SIDE.

General Thomas Ewing, whom nobody will accuse of being a radical black republican said the other day to a Chicago reporter:

I shall vote for Cleveland but will not take the stump. Mr. Blaine is my intimate friend. In every private relation of life as son, husband, father, friend, I know no kinder, purer or better man, and among our public men he stands unsurpassed as an embodiment of the spirit and genius of the American people. I don't believe if every letter he ever wrote and every word he ever uttered were published to the world that they would fasten on him a single act or thought of official corruption. If a man be true in his private relations as from his boyhood I have known him to be he is not likely to be false to the people.

If some good Blaine republican will now rise up, if he is able to do so and say something of the same kind for the accidental functionary who poses as the democratic candidate, it might make the latter feel better than he does now. He needs it badly.

The Methodist Episcopal Church

Hardly attention enough has been given to the action of the Cincinnati conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. On the first day of its session a committee of eleven of the most prominent doctors of divinity were appointed on "public morals." Their report was approved by the conference and deserves notice. They say:

The startling [illegible] the character of an [illegible] of public men [illegible] national [illegible] the people of the whole country be not a proper subject of discussion and that private character [illegible] for high public positions and should not influence the suffrages of conscientious patriots. We [illegible] of having such principles [illegible] homes. When [illegible] both the [illegible] and the [illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] young man to regard a pure character and a spotless life as matters of secondary consideration. That such "evil fruit" from this "corrupt tree" has already appeared, we are too well assured to doubt. By the public teaching of such sentiments the sanctity of the family is invaded, the virtue of our children is imperiled, the purity of our public men is endangered, the morals of every community are poisoned, the honor of the whole nation as people is assailed, the very safety and perpetuity of this nation are involved. In view of these perils therefore

RESOLVED 1. That it is the solemn judgment of this conference of christian ministers that the [illegible] and political [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of this great republic which are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

No public man is named in this report, nor is there anything in it save the language quoted to give application to the stinging resolutions with which it closes.—Tribune.

An Outrageous Attack Upon Clergymen.

The Albany Argus is Grover Cleveland's organ. It is mainly owned by Daniel Manning, chairman of the democratic state committee. Mr. Lamont, Grover Cleveland's private secretary, is managing editor of the Argus and is understood to have a good deal to do with the political outcome of that paper. Last Sunday this personal organ of Grover Cleveland made a most brutal and shameful attack upon clergymen, as the following extract from its columns will show:

"The preliminary training requisite to become expert procurers of scandal has not been denied these ecclesiastical slum walkers, and they have also brought to the business such characters and habits as are entirely in keeping with the needs of their new industry. They have noses for nastiness, ears for forbidden language, the veneer of a trade which enables them to refer the meanest devices to noblest motives, a matriculation in the school of tittle tattle and an instant capacity to extemporize a day of judgment and to play providence on men and motives, with a sleekness of manner and an elevation of the albumen of the eyes that cannot be exceeded outside of that special corner of hades, of which the r peers, not lost, but gone before have an undisputed monopoly. * * * The spirit of Italy in the ranges of the slum ways of gossip, malice insinuation and lies is akin to that which 300 years and less, found fault at the stake [illegible] for the undercook [illegible] * * He who invested [illegible] in an endeavor to [illegible] scoundrels of other sex ready to swear away the reputation, which a clerical vampire calls his character, would wantonly waste $2.50 of the amount. * * The half dozen of [illegible] bigots or blackguards who [illegible] have engaged to blacken the character of public men are not, in the [illegible] of wise decent and manly ministers doing their calling any good service. They are making their profession a [illegible] for [illegible] from which forgers, burglars, confidence men, murderers and [illegible] hold back, out of self respect. They are planting in the minds of the [illegible] the consciousness that a clergyman and a blackmailer have many points of contact. By the avarice [illegible] to which they [illegible] for money, they create the belief that they delight to work on the [illegible] of hyenas on the bodies of the dead. They impair that regard and respect for the clergy as a class the winning return of which is a matter [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of character with [illegible] which [illegible] [illegible] the approval of practical people with generous and hearty [illegible].

And what was the occasion of this [illegible] It was because a number of clergymen of Buffalo have after the most careful examination of unimpeachable evidence against Grover Cleveland declared that he is not a fit man to place in the white house and at the head of this nation. It was for this that Grover Cleveland's personal organ poured out its vile and infernal malice upon ministers of the Gospel. This [illegible] was made by Grover Cleveland's Albany organ in its issue of last Sunday and it is to be assumed that it met Grover Cleveland's exact views and wishes for three days have passed and no word of dissent comes from him on the subject.

It is for decent men of all parties to say what they think of such words as are quoted above from the Sunday edition of Grover Cleveland's personal organ.—Elmira Advertiser.

THE laboring classes constitute the main part of our population. They should be protected in their efforts peaceably to assert their rights when endangered by aggregate capital and all statutes on this subject should recognize the care of the state for honest toil and be framed with a view of improving the condition of the working man.—GROVER CLEVELAND.

Taffy, taffy! Grover pure taffy and everybody knows it. The workingman fortunately knows the difference between mere words thrown out to catch votes and actions which speak louder than words. He knows what your few acts have been and he don't care a cent for your words for he knows your dishonest character well enough to know that you can't make your words coincide with your acts for to attempt to do so would be doubly fatal to your aspirations.

THE Era's attack on Mr. Koester the other day, was very unjust. In an underhanded way it insinuates that his management of the affairs of the county committee while its chairman was dishonorable. It cannot be denied that Mr. Koester made a successful campaign; that a committee of republicans audited his account of receipts and expenditures and found that he paid out more money to the extent of $50 and upwards than he received from all sources. We cannot understand why he should be so bitterly pursued by the Era, unless it is because of some personal grievance. The young men of this county will see that Mr. Koester is elected irregardless of the opposition of the Era.

J. M. McKenny, Esq., the republican nominee for prothonotary, is proving to be a popular candidate. He is an intelligent cultured upright gentleman and wherever he goes through out the county he makes friends. He will visit every section of the county before election and give the people an opportunity to make his acquaintance which will insure his election.

It don't make much difference which is the "leading man"—both are bound to get there in due season. By the way, isn't Mr. Hen—Tail the "leading man" on the other ticket?

FALLING INTO LINE.

The Erie (N. Y.) county prohibitionists met in convention in the city of Buffalo on Monday last. There was a large attendance, and on the question of separate party action great interest was manifested, the sentiment of the convention being almost unanimous against it.

The committee appointed for that purpose reported a preamble and resolutions which were in effect that the conservative prohibition element expressing its earnest convictions of duty, reiterating its devotion to the principles of the prohibition party and the support of its candidates when prohibition can be practically promoted by so doing. But the utility of running independent candidates for offices where no good could be done was doubted. They favored the submission of a constitutional amendment to the people of the state, and that it be voted on at a special election when there is no other issue at stake. They pledge support to candidates for legislative honors who will favor the submission of such an amendment. Prohibition should not be made a national issue until it has become an assured fact in at least three-fourths of the states. Therefore it is impolitic, unwise, and suicidal to the prohibition cause to support an independent national ticket in this campaign.

The members of the committee spoke in favor of the resolutions and declared their intentions to vote for Blaine and Logan.

W. H. Hamilton declared that the prohibition ticket was hopeless and true temperance people must do the next best thing, and that was to vote for James G. Blaine.

W. Barker said he had been a prohibitionist for twenty five years, and the only way he saw to help prohibition was to vote with the republican party, that party being the only one to look to for help in the cause. "If I vote for St. John," queried he, "shall I not help the democratic party into power?"

The resolutions were put to a vote. The chorus of noes was strong in sound but when it came to a rising vote just eight men were shown to oppose the resolutions.

The meeting then adjourned.

An American Administration.

(Alexander Sullivan's speech in New York.)

In what I am about to say to you my fellow citizens I speak in no tone of uncertainty. I speak no words of mere conjecture, but I speak by authority and I would not have spoken to you on this occasion without that authority. With that authority fully and unqualifiedly given I say to you that the next administration of the United States under the presidency of James G. Blaine will be an American administration. The rights of American citizens at home and abroad will be protected not in any cowardly, not in any apologetic, not in any hesitating manner but with firmness, dignity, determination with a due appreciation of the obligation of the country to citizens who swear allegiance to it and from whom it expects obedience to its laws and if needs be their lives in defence of its institutions. The administration of James G. Blaine will insist that every American in foreign lands who is accused of an offense or is sought to be impressed into the military service of the land which he renounced when he became an American, or whose right of person or of property is in any way infringed upon shall be completely, absolutely guarded; that he shall be given a fair trial and an unmolested trial; that he shall be given an opportunity to use his own means in his own defense and that the nearest American consul or minister shall be informed immediately of the arrest of any man who is or claims to be an American citizen that the power of the government may be used to secure for him complete and immediate justice.

THE democrats have nominated a young man by the name of Walter Sherwood for congress in this district. He is a resident of Wellsboro, the son of his father and a sprig of the law of exceedingly moderate attainments. The Era thinks this insures Brown's election by from 2000 to 2500 majority. We agree with the Era.

BLAINE'S trip through Ohio has set at rest any doubt as to the position of that state in the national contest. If any existed before there is none now. No candidate for presidential honors was ever received and hailed with more generous or general demonstrations of enthusiasm and regard.

ARRANGEMENTS are about being made to enlarge the Norristown asylum so as to accommodate one thousand more patients.—Democrat.

Is it possible that the result of the coming election will have such an effect on so many democrats?

GENERAL WM. LILLY of Mauch Chunk was chosen to fill the vacancy in the Pennsylvania republican electoral ticket caused by the death of John Leisenring.

CLEVELAND will be elected if he can only find enough convicts. He recently emptied the N. Y. prisons of fifty of them in one day.

GEN. BEAVER says he does not want the appointment of commissioner of pensions and would not accept it if offered him.

THE Butlerites will hold their county convention in Bradford on Thursday Oct. 16th at 2 o'clock p. m.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE Chicago Tribune suggests that St. John will only work where he can help Cleveland.—Rochester Democrat.

THEY have been abusing you as they did me, but they will elect you, never theless.—Gen. U. S. Grant to James G. Blaine.

THE latest reports about Mrs. Lockwood are that she says Mrs. Hayes was president four years, and she doesn't see why she shouldn't be.

BEN BUTLER is undertaking enough work for a dozen men. He is trying to deny the campaign lies of the New York World.—Baltimore American.

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, who is now on the stump for Blaine and Logan, is said to have inherited some of the eloquence of his father, the "Little Giant" of Illinois.

IT takes more grit in the gizzard to be a democrat this year than ever before. Not only the platform but the candidates are wholly indigestible for an honest man's stomach.

Why, then, should genuine democrats any longer think of tying themselves up to such a hopeless candidacy? It was a mistake from the first. We warned its authors before the nomination at Chicago that they were engaged in an enterprise which was doomed to disaster; and this doom is now so plainly apparent that only the blind can fail to see it.—New York Sun.

That cyclone at Al on last Sunday was a hardly perceptible zephyr compared with the tornado that will sweep over the whole country on the 4th of next month. Only democrats, however, need take the precautions to strap down their houses and tie their hats on their heads.

The First Polo Game.

The skating rink was crowded last Saturday evening to witness the game of polo between the Smethport and Aiken teams. Although our home team had never played a game before and some of them never saw one, they went to work with their accustomed vigor and laid the Aiken team out in great style. The score stood 5 to 1 in favor of the home team. Last Wednesday evening a return game was played between the same teams at Aiken which resulted in favor of the Aiken team by a score of 1 to 5. The third game will be played at the rink here some evening next week which promises to be a lively set to between the friendly teams.

Old and New Egypt.

Hon Lewis Emery Jr. has consented to deliver his lecture on "Old and New Egypt" in Kittredge Opera House on Wednesday evening, Oct. 15th next for the benefit of McKean Post G. A. R. No. 347. Having heard this lecture on a former occasion we have no hesitancy in pronouncing it intensely interesting and invaluable as a historical contribution. The lecture is illustrated by means of stereopticon views thrown upon canvass in colors the beauty of which we will not attempt to describe. For the time being one seems to be transported to and roaming around among the ruins of old Egypt and the gardens and palaces of the new. No one should fail to attend this lecture as it will not only prove of benefit to the Grand Army Post but highly instructive.

COMMUNICATIONS

Not an Orangeman.

EDITOR MINER.—The latest trap sprung upon the unsuspecting Irish citizens of Smethport borough and of McKean county by the faction who think they have a mortgage on the sheriff's office of this county is that Tony Rannon is an Orangeman. Now, as a full blooded Irishman and a life long democrat I will say for the benefit of Irishmen that Mr. Rannon is not an Orangeman, but is an Irishman and I am not deny it. They also say is a strictly Protestant commu... nity that he is a Catholic. I will say to them some of the county do not be bull dozed by any such pasteboard button holing for it won't bear the light of day. It is not consistent talk. Mr Rannon is a man every inch; he has never committed nor can the Sartwell gang point to an act against him but what has been manly in every respect and every Irishman that takes the hand of Tony will say that he has never had a mortgage on any office but that he has worked hard for what he has. Now is shown when citizens of this county saw fit to nominate Mr. Rannon for sheriff of this county every one, no matter who you are should go to the polls and vote for A. F. Rannon for sheriff in preference to the hungry Sartwell gang.

AN IRISH DEMOCRAT

Smethport Pa. Sept. 29 1884

That St. John Speech.

EDITOR MINER.—Yes we heard the Rev. Dr. Huntington's St. John's speech in Smethport. To use a mild term, it was an unfair putting of the case. He is a good talker. Eugene Mullin says he is eloquent but he says so because Chapman didn't like the speech.

The Dr. arraigned the republican party and lashed it unmercifully (?) as if it is the father of all the evil this country ever experienced. He said not a word against the democratic party except a slight insinuation that its conduct was not exactly proper during the rebellion. He praised the democracy of Maine, Georgia, Missouri and Pennsylvania, and an individual democrat of New York state. But they do not deserve the praise they got in Pennsylvania, because it is not true. Notwithstanding the facts in the case, several democrats gave audible approval to the Dr's praise. He said that when the republicans came into power they found a local option law on the statutes of Pennsylvania, and they repealed it. Now the facts are the republicans found no local option in this state, but, in 1872 a republican legislature passed the local option law that the Dr referred to. In 1875 a democratic legislature, (both houses, strongly so) repealed that local option law. The writer did not correct the speaker as he requested, because he is a D. D. and ought to have known whether or not his statements were correct. It is to be hoped for the Dr's sake and for the sake of the great moral cause he champions, that his other statements were nearer correct. His remarks were few on the individual candidates. He ridiculed Blaine, because he didn't vote to oust him in Maine and accused him of truckling to the liquor traffic because he wanted the whisky revenue appropriated to the school fund. Can it be that prohibitionists, the Dr. with the rest, think that the legislature of 1856 wanted every man to be a drunkard because it enacted that drunken men should be fined for the benefit of the school fund? One conclusion is just as logical as the other. Now, the Dr. was very positive about his beliefs of Mr. Blaine, but when it came to Mr. Cleveland he had "no opinion," but simply said "if the papers tell the truth he is a libertine." He arraigned John A. Logan because in 1854 (we think) he championed a bill through the Illinois legislature that oppressed the negroes. His entire silence as to Thomas A. Hendricks made us believe that his (Hendricks') conduct had always been entirely proper.

In the outset we said he is a good speaker, but he made no votes in Smethport and he never will make any so long as he delivers that speech.

Yours, C.

Smethport, Pa., Sept. 30, 1884.

THE SENATORIAL CONVENTION.

Hon. Lewis Emery, Jr., Re-nominated for State Senate.

Thursday of last week the senatorial delegates selected by the republicans of the three counties composing the twenty-fifth senatorial district met at the Grand Central Hotel in Mansfield, Tioga county, pursuant to call for a district convention.

The convention was organized by electing O. B. Lowell, of Tioga, as chairman and A. J. Carr, of Bradford, secretary. The respective counties in the district were represented by the following delegates:

Potter—D. G. Chapin, I. P. Collins, W. B. Brightman.

Tioga—O. B. Lowell, George W. Williams, Matthew Waddell, James Maher, Peter VanNess, William Giles, ... Dell Wilson.

After the roll of delegates was called Mr. Rogers of McKean said he supposed it was expected that they would protest against the number of delegates having admission from Tioga county. McKean would cast a larger republican vote than ever this year but McKean had only three delegates present. They did not come prepared to outvote Tioga even with the assistance of Potter. In his opinion the matter should have been fixed before the convention met. He admitted that Tioga was entitled to a larger representation than McKean and the latter should have more than Potter. In all probabilities the apportionment to be made next winter would separate McKean from Tioga senatorially and why change the representation at this time? He suggested that the seven delegates from Tioga be allowed to sit in conference, but cast only three votes.

Mr. Williams of Tioga county said that the other counties in the district had notice in April that the people of Tioga demanded at their county convention the seven delegates as a fair representation of the republican vote. The question had been discussed through the newspapers and it seemed that the other counties must be fully aware as to what Tioga asked for. He recommended that Tioga be allowed seven delegates. McKean five and Tioga three and he suggested that the McKean delegates cast five votes in the convention.

Mr. Chapin of Potter thought that was not the time to fix the question of representation. He suggested that a resolution be passed to adjust the question in the future. However he moved that the seven delegates be admitted and allowed to cast seven votes. The motion was seconded.

Mr. Brightman of Potter said that he desired peace and harmony but he must oppose the motion, for he thought the matter of representation should be settled by a higher authority.

Mr. Carr of McKean said that he was satisfied that the delegates from Tioga county were elected in good faith by the people and he should vote for their admission to the convention because he thought it was no right that they should be disfranchised. At the same time he wanted it understood that his vote was in the interest of harmony and not to establish a precedent.

The roll was then called and the vote on the admission of the seven Tioga delegates was as follows: Yeas—Carr, Chapin, Williams, Waddell, Lowell—5. Nays—Rogers, Sprague, Collins, Brightman—4.

The convention then proceeded to the nomination of a candidate for state senator.

Mr. Brightman, of Potter, presented the name of Don C. Larrabee, Mr. Matthew Waddell of Tioga, presented the name of Lewis Emery Jr.

A ballot was then taken. McKean cast three votes for Emery, Tioga cast seven votes for Emery and Potter cast three votes for Larrabee.

On motion of Mr. Chapin, seconded by Mr. Brightman of Potter the nomination of Mr. Emery was made unanimous.

Messrs. Sprague of McKean, Chapin, of Potter, and Van Ness of Tioga were appointed to wait upon Mr. Emery and inform him of his nomination.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

RESOLVED, That Hon. Lewis Emery, jr., the nominee to-day presented to the electors of the twenty-fifth senatorial district for their suffrages because of his unswerving allegiance to true republicanism, his uncompromising hostility to the increasing power of monopolies, his open and avowed advocacy of the right of the people to have an amendment to the constitution on the subject of prohibition submitted for determination is entitled to and should receive the earnest and unqualified support of republicans as well as good citizens of all parties."

Mr. Emery then came before the convention and said:

GENTLEMEN: You have nominated me for the second time for the office of senator. At the beginning of the term during which it has been my pleasure to serve you in the state senate there were rumors of war, and since that time there have been differences in our own party. I based my convictions of duty on what I believed to be the right, and acted accordingly. We have to-day a reunited and sound party. But for our differences then the republican party would have been to-day in the same condition of the republicans in the state of New York two years ago. Pennsylvania republicans were not alone in their action two years ago. Other states that were as surely republican gave democratic majorities. There was a reason for these troubles then. I had no interest except the interest of a business man and to work for the best interests of the people. My efforts in the future, if I am elected, shall be exerted for the protection of the whole people and the best interests of the republican party. I thank you, and through you, the one hundred and odd thousand people of this district for this indorsement and renomination.

Mr. Williams, of Tioga suggested that one delegate from each county be appointed to compose a senatorial committee, whose duty it should be to call future senatorial conventions by giving twenty days' published notice.

Mr. Rogers said that by general consent the chairman of the several county committees were authorized to call the conventions and as long as it was so understood it was well enough to leave it in their hands.

This was tacitly agreed to, and no further action was taken on that subject.

The convention then adjourned.

We will do no man injustice in this campaign if we know it. From information obtained we do not believe Miles Allen has attempted to prevent any man from being registered or from paying his taxes.

The Brooklyn Bridge.

After about fourteen years hard labor the great suspension bridge between New York and Brooklyn has been completed and thus two large cities connected in a manner which was never dreamed of in Revolutionary times. It is indeed the crowning work of the century and can be classed among the wonders of this country. The suspension bridge at Niagara Falls and over the Ohio river at Cincinnati are merely foot bridges in comparison with it. Its dimensions, history and cost are familiar with all readers of the daily papers and do not need to be repeated here but we do wish to speak of PERUNA, the greatest discovery of this century. It is a medicine discovered by Dr. S. B. Hartman of Pittsburg, and prescribed by him in thousands of cases during thirty years of continuous practice. Ask your druggist for the pamphlet entitled the Ills of Life which gives full and complete directions for the preservation of the health. Try Peruna the great tonic.

Bad Barney.

Barney McCalmont of Bradford played a bad joke on the Cleveland club of Coudersport. He agreed to deliver an address at the rink Friday evening. The bills were circulated but early in the afternoon McCalmont hired a team and left for Port Allegany without saying a word to the managers or making any explanation whatever. From Port Allegany he sent word that he would return if desired but the club concluded to get along without him. McCalmont certainly treated them shabbily.—Potter Enterprise.

This is one of Barney's old tricks but then, he is not running for any office in Potter county and so it don't make much difference. The people of McKean county will probably give him the same answer next fall. We can get along without him.

WATCH THE KIDNEYS,

They are the most important secretory organs. Into and through the Kidneys flow the waste fluids of the body, containing poisonous matter taken out of the system. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained, the whole system becomes disordered and the following symptoms will follow: Headache, weakness, pain in the small of back and loins, flushes of heat, chills, with disordered stomach and bowels. You can thoroughly protect the Kidneys by BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, and when any of these symptoms manifest themselves you can quickly rid yourself of them by this best of all medicines for the Kidneys. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS are sold everywhere at $1 per bottle, and one bottle will prove their efficacy.

How Canned Goods Are Poisoned.

[Rochester Post Express.]

A great many persons have been poisoned lately by eating canned provisions. A Brooklyn physician has been making examinations to discover the reason. He has discovered that in many cases it is customary to fasten on the top of the can with an amalgam of muriate of zinc, that this amalgam was put on with brushes by boys and the soldering iron then passed around it; that nothing was easier than for some of the muriate of zinc to get inside of the can and that, when there, it must become absorbed in the contents and render the latter extremely poisonous. [illegible] the canned provisions.

Three Reasons.

A western cowboy gives three reasons for wearing his hair long. First, there are no barbers on the plains; second, it protects the ears in winter; third, it makes the Indians think him brave.

Queer Countenances.

[M. Orley in The Current.]

We have it on the authority of Dr. Karl Muller that in his boyhood he knew a man who, Janus-like, had two totally different faces, one side laughing and the other crying. "Naturally," he says, "I dreaded this strange, double-face, with one side smooth, plump and comely, like a girl's cheek, while the other was all marred by the small pox. This side of the face denoted churlish ness, and, while the other bore a smile, this looked morose!"

The same authority is also responsible for the following story: I was once sitting in a cool underground saloon at Lagos while without people were ready to die from the heat, when a new guest entered and took a seat opposite to me. The sweat rolled in great drops down his face and he was kept busy with his handkerchief, until at last he found relief in the exclamation "Fearfully hot!" I watched him attentively as he called for a cool drink for I expected every moment he would fall from his chair in a fit of apoplexy.

The man must have noticed that I was observing him for he turned toward me, and, smiling, saying: "I am a curious sort of person am I not?" "Why?" I asked. "Because I perspire only on my right side," he responded. And so it was. His right cheek and the right half of his forehead were as hot as fire, while the left side of his face bore not a trace of perspiration. I had never seen the like and [illegible] with him regarding this physiological phenomenon [illegible] the left house in [illegible] remark. Then we are [illegible] only on the left side. The formation is a miniature cyclone as perfect as any started in the clouds. It is funnel shaped and whirls around rapidly. By using the plate over a table the experimenter lifts up copper cents, pens, pencils and other objects and scatters them [illegible].

D. Langell's Asthma and Catarrh Remedy.

Having struggled 20 years between life and death with ASTHMA or PHTHISIC, treated by eminent physicians and receiving no benefit, I was compelled, during the last five years of my illness to sit on my chair day and night gasping for breath, my sufferings were beyond description. In despair I experimented on myself by compounding roots and herbs and inhaling the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discovered this WONDERFUL CURE for ASTHMA and CATARRH, warranted to relieve the most stubborn case of ASTHMA IN FIVE MINUTES, so the patient can lie down to rest and sleep comfortably. Any person not fully satisfied after using one-third of a box, can return the remainder to the proprietor and the money will be refunded, or send me your address for a trial package FREE OF CHARGE. Mrs. W. T. Brown, Monroe, Texas, writes: "I suffered with Asthma 30 years. Your Great Remedy completely cured me. I wish all afflicted with Asthma and Catarrh to send for it. Publish this for the benefit of the afflicted." Should your druggist not keep the Remedy, I can send it by mail on receipt of price $1.00. For sale by all druggists. Address
